Education is not just about teaching facts, figures and information. It is about so much more - providing the skills to think independently, ignite creativity, develop emotional resilience, rise and embrace opportunities and challenges that cross our paths in preparation for life's journey.

We will explore how a balanced, holistic, systemic approach can be authentically provided to enable best outcomes for all.

Join us as we consider 'working with the whole' - incorporating mind, body and brain.

The engage in their future National Conference is ideal for professionals and practitioners working with children and young adults affected by social, emotional and mental health challenges (SEMH), or anyone with an interest in this area of education and social care.
